SHORT GRAMMAR.

(Here are ten couplets, not now, however, giving the shortest English grammar up to date.)

Three little words you often see Are articles, a, an, the.

A noun's the name of anything As school or garden, horse or car.

Adjectives tell the kind of noun,
As great, small, pretty, white, or brown.

Instead of nouns the pronouns stand—His head, her face, your arm, my hand.

Verbs tell something to be done—
To read, count, laugh, sing, jump, or run.

Adverbs tell the how of the verb—As slowly, quickly, ill or well.

Conjunctions join the words together—As men and women, wind and weather.

Prepositions stand before The noun, as in, or through, the door.

Interjections show surprise, Oh how pretty, Ah how wise.

The whole are called nine parts of speech, Which reading, writing, speaking teach.

MISS GRANDISON.

She came in the full glory of autumn's richest coloring, when "October" was written on every hill and vale in the red and yellow tones of fallen leaves, and the designed richness of the Indian summer atmosphere bathing all in golden splendor.

Brother Ralph and I stood on the veranda to welcome her, and as she came in the broad white steps, the mellow sunlight flashing back from her golden hair and seeming to hide itself in the dark depths of her wondrous brown eyes, she became associated in my mind with the rich, dusky beauty, the still, glowing splendor of an incomparable month—October. I knew the right of her, and I knew of her for day.

I took her small gloved hand in mine a moment with a few pleasant words of welcome, then Ralph did the same.

And when he reached it, which was not quite so soon, as I should have done, I noticed an unusual flush mount to his hands, fair face, and I feared that he was in danger of losing his heart at the outset to our fair governess.

Yes, this rare creature, to be our governess, had won Ralph's favor, was now, long, last, one school day, but had had two troublesome young sisters, to take charge of whom Miss Grandison had traveled a long way. Hers was a singular beauty, the like of which I had never seen before. Her complexion, the one which should be fair to match the bright dazzling gold on her hair, was it was not, instead it suited her deep brown eyes, and was what I can only describe as a creamy olive, with a spot of richest crimson on either cheek.
She was a good girl, with a gentle, winsome air, that reminded me of all the deep passion and intensity of October's warmth veiled in the soft light of day.

She had a large fortune willed to her by an uncle of her husband, whose heiress she was, Ralph's eyes lingered on her lovely features, through jealousy and greed, but he never compelled to turn them away for shame's sake. Time passed very pleasantly. We lived in the country, or rather just outside of a stirring town, and we could just therefore combine the pleasures of both city and country life.

How Miss Grandison enjoyed her outdoor rambles with the children in the brilliant tinted autumn woods! Her frequent smiles, I seemed to me, who was a stranger to her, were the smile of a girl watched with jealous eyes, every movement that indicated his growing interest in the charming stranger.

We knew nothing of her save that she was from a Southern city, and was thrown upon her own resources for support. But her beauty spoke for itself, and I felt convinced the moment that Ralph first set his eyes upon her that sooner or later she would break his heart.

I wonder why the thought never struck me that she, a poor girl, was from a Southern city, and was thrown

his eyes upon her that sooner or later she would break his heart.

There was not the least sign of coquetry about her, nor did she seem to care at all for his attentions. She accepted them quietly, smiling, when she could not evade them, yet I always felt that she would rather die than not offer them. I liked her for that, though I couldn't get over the idea that she would be his fate.

One day, in late October, November, the sun shone maddening and almost a summer warmth pervaded the atmosphere. Tempted by the beauty of the scene I donned my hat and coat and went for a stroll in the leafless woods. I had not gone far when the sound of Ralph's voice struck my ear. It was strained and distracting, and he was saying, oh, how earnestly:

"For God's sake, Flora, give me a little hope!"

When winter came round again we were expecting little, who were the heat about once more, and intended to bring a friend to help him enjoy his winter home.

How handsome Ralph looked as he walked smiling and happy into the middle of a family circle, and what a wondrous looking man was the stranger who walked close behind him.

He had found Paul Grandison, had told him where his wife was, and what a true, pure woman she had proven herself.

Paul had come with him to knock at Flora's feet (as he afterward told me) and crave her pardon.

I think Ralph was almost as happy when Flora turned those beautiful brown eyes upon him and murmured: "God bless you, my noble friend, as he would have been could his own dream of winning her have been fulfilled.

Then Murphy spoke up, and pointing to a little house nestled among the thick growth of trees at the foot of a high bluff, informed me that was where he had been staying.

At once I determined to remain and see the fight, so I offered the Irishman $5 a day to let me stay at his house and witness the battle, and he consented.

Early the next morning he suggested we go to the top of the bluff, where the Union forces, under Colonel Alvord, had been posted, and I agreed.

He had been well prepared, and the army had been well prepared, and the battle was to be fought there.

At last I met some men I knew were not soldiers, so I ventured to ask a few questions about my way out—in other words, how to get beyond the lines. Among them was an Irishman by the name of Murphy, who said:

"Why don't you stay and see the

This was news to me. "Is there going to be a fight here?" I asked.

Grover Cleveland gave $20,000 to the Charleston sufferers whose homes were demolished by earthquakes and $10,000 to the Democratic Committee to aid his election. Comment is unnecessary.

Democratic postmasters in Ohio have been caught opening packages of newspapers, republican, and enclosing democratic campaign documents in them. There is nothing under the sun they won't do to carry a point, from thieving to forgery.

The story of George Brinskie, the man who served in the civil war as Grover Cleveland's substitute, has often been published, but not in his own words. He died a few months ago of the consumption, the result probably of the service he had seen. Shortly before his death he wrote briefly of his treatment at the hands of Grover Cleveland, to M. H. Trux, now of Saginaw, but then of Detroit. In the letter he says that all the remuneration he ever received was $150 paid at the time of enlistment. Ever since Mr. Cleveland has refused to pay the additional sum which he had promised, and George Brinskie, lacking the sum due him from the one in whose trust he faced bullets, died in want.— Detroit Tribune.

The country will not fail to notice that the bill to grant a pension to Mrs.
Sheridan was stopped in the House, Friday, by two democratic objectors, and one of them, a Texas confederate, openly avowed his purpose to defeat the bill.—State Republican.

When Thurman, the "butternut" candidate of the democrat, was in the Senate, he voted to pension Jefferson Davis, the recognized head of the democratic party in the South, if not in the North, just the same as if he had been loyal to the government. They crowned him "Lord of all," with a silver crown at a democratic state convention, but they will have to replace three republican senators with three others who believe in rewarding traitors before he will be placed on the roll that should contain none but those of patriots.

Union S. S. Convention.

School workers in Crawford county tainment will be furnished all who attend.

man of Committee on entertainment you.

M. H. Reynolds of Owosso, State Secretary will deliver an address.

C. E. HICKS, PRES.

G. H. HICKS, Sec.

The free traders are shouting now that free trade is not an issue. If there is any other name due the party that passes a law establishing free trade in wool and in other articles now paying a tariff of $22,000,000, what is it? How much free trade does a party have to provide by legislation to make it a free trade party?—Chicago Journal.

That the Mills bill is a free trade measure is admitted by leading democratic members of the "dark lantern" wing of the Ways and Means committee of the House, which concocted the attack on American industries. Congressman Breckinridge, of Arkansas, a member of the committee virtually admits this, but shows the inconsistency and cowardice of the democrats by the following language in regard to the bill:

"The bill as passed is not a free trade bill but is a step in that direction. The only fault I have to find with it is that the step is not long enough. All our efforts will be to convince the voters that the ourself is unrepresentative."

We've got to do that or be defeated. If most of the people prefer high taxes; if we win it will mean that the bill is a preliminary step toward Free Trade is all right."

The democrat party is now pretending that it is in favor of political equality, and is moving heaven and earth to make converts among the colored people of the North, but in the South fraud and the shot gun will be the arguments used, as they are cheaper and more effective. Their candidate for vice president held different views but a short time since, as will be seen by the following extract from one of his speeches:

"Of all the delusions I have ever known, the idea of political equality between the black and white races seems to me the greatest."

And yet it is proposed to confer upon one inferior race the dominion over one third of the Republic and to make it a balance of power that nine times out of ten would, for that reason, control the whole country. There can be but one end to this scheme, if it be much longer prosecuted. It is impossible that the race to which we belong is impossible that so inferior a race as the negro can compete with the white man in the business; much less the politics of the country. The extermination of the negro or his expulsion from the country must be the inevitable result of the radical policy if persisted in."

The party has found out that they cannot expel them from the country, as the South cannot do without their labor, and they cannot exterminate them entirely as public opinion would not admit of it, and for another reason given by the Old Roman at Port Huron, that they were such prolific animals; they have concluded if they wish to continue in power they must persuade them to vote the democrat ticket.

A Warning.

The methods of death's approach are various, and statistics show es-clusively that more persons die from diseases of the Throat and Lungs than any other. It is probable that everyone, without exception, receives vast numbers of Tubercle Germs into the system and when these germs fall upon suitable soil they start into life and develop, at first slowly and is shown by a slight tickling sensation in the throat and if allowed to continue their ravages they extend to the lungs producing Consumption and to the head, causing Catarrh. Now all this is dangerous and if allowed to progress will in time cause death. At the onset you must act with promptness; allowing a cold to go without attention is dangerous and may lose your life.
As soon as you feel that something is wrong with your Throat, Lungs or Nostrils, obtain a bottle of Boschee's German Syrup. It will give you immediate relief.

Beaver Creek Gleanings.— Messrs. Hastings and Hanna are thrashing in this neighborhood.

Miss Minnie Ford has returned from her trip to Eaton Rapids where she was visiting. She commences her school in Dist. No. 2, this week.

Miss Elena Hanna and Master Rudolph Hanna are expected home this week.

Elder Knight received about $6.00 from the people of Beaver Creek, and about the same amount from Gladie township.

Two loads of people went from this township to hear the Elder preach, last Sunday evening, at the Gladie schoolhouse.

I beg leave to differ with the Editor in regard to the lady he spoke of as being the oldest in the county. There is an old lady living at J. P. Hanna's in this township, who was born in 1800 and is 88 years old next October. She has resided in this township almost four years. She is the mother of Mrs.
J. P. Hanna and grandmother of Mr.
John Hanna and Mrs. T. E. Hastings.

In the last issue of the Democrat,

"Stub" says "the tattlers failed to meet, etc." I wish to inform Stub and the readers of the Democrat that he is very much mistaken. The Literary Society did meet but on account of insufficient members being present adjourned until our next regular meeting.

The society is not known by the name of Tattlers. Stub must be having a billious attack, * or feels bad in the region of his stomach.

Mrs. Wm. Hanson has gone to Shiwassee county to visit her sister, and William is left to get his own meals.

GLEANER.—Pip, is what's the matter with him.

Center Plains and Elsewhere.

C. D. Vincent is pegging away at the new school house in Dist. No. 1 of Center Plains and expects to have it completed soon. It will be much more convenient than the old one, being near the center of the district.

M. Gwattkin, one of the first settlers of this township, is talking of selling his farm and going into some other business. He has been, and is to be-day, a hard worker for a man of his years, and is a thorough farmer, a good neighbor and respected by all who know him, and we shall be sorry to lose him.

Farmers are busy sowing wheat and corn, and are having got through, hoping it will not do more damage than was thought at first, the buckwheat crop is a failure.

The Democrat says S. Hatt for Treasurer on the republican ticket this fall. Now the question is, can the democrats help forth a better man to put on their ticket, we think not, and if Mr. Hatt is nominated, we shall be there to help elect him.

A staunch republican of this place, allows his daughter to wear a reform budge; this ought not to be as it might influence some of our young men, and it seems as if we had enough reform in the last four years to satisfy the most fastidious. A word to the wise, &c.

Don't we feel proud of our fellow townsmen L. M. Silsby the architect, he knows how to splice them and make them look good as new, (court houses we mean.)

of the most important of the century,
